

BURRA 2022: Information Circular No. 1

The 26th Annual Conference of the Australasian Mining History Association (postponed from 2021 due to Covid-related travel restrictions) will be held in Burra, South Australia, from 18-23 September 2022 with a post-conference tour to Moonta-Wallaroo on 24-25 September.

Burra Mine ca.1867

Copper ore was discovered at Burra, 160 km north of Adelaide, in 1845. The discovery proved to be an extremely rich oxidised ore deposit, and a large mine (the “Monster Mine”) and a nearby township were soon established. The mine created a settlement of about 5,000 people, the largest inland town in Australia before the gold rushes. Cornish technology was imported to develop the mine and by the 1850s the first large-scale Cornish mining landscape in Australia had been created. Mining continued until 1877 when rising costs and a downturn in the copper price brought about its closure. Further mining by open cut took place from 1971 until 1983. Burra encompasses one of Australia’s largest and best-preserved nineteenth century mining towns and both the township and the mine site were proclaimed a State Heritage Area in 1994 and included in the National Heritage List in 2017. The township retains many buildings and structures from the time when mine was one of the world’s great copper producers. The former mine site includes three surviving Cornish engine houses, one of which has been restored as an interpretation centre, and several other significant masonry structures such as the powder magazine.

The main conference activities will be held in the Burra Town Hall, Market Street, Burra. The front entrance is reached by steep stairs. There is a ground level entrance on the north side, which can be reached on foot by a ramp from Market Street, or by car via Mount Pleasant Road.
